Monitoring with Confidence

“These smartphones do open the world to kids, and there's good and there's bad," said Michael Brody, from the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry. "I understand that parents want to use [tracking services] to make things safer, but they may be defeating their purposes. The way you make your children safe is to make them able to take care of themselves by themselves.”

Talk about boundaries and come up with them AND consequences

TOGETHER

Technology: Managing & Monitoring with Confidence

- having their username and passwords
- they need to friend you
- have a set spot in your house for tech at night
- no tech at the dinner table
- keep tech in public places
- if you are unsure about anything, talk to me
- homework must be done first
